To change an image from PSD to JPEG, you'll need to convert all the layers into smart objects. This process is explained in Chapter 3. You can also add watermark, smart tag, and text in Photoshop. You can insert a copyright or company logo into an image without having to rasterize it.

Watercolor In its simplest form, watercolor is a paint-based art that uses sheets of watercolor paper, water, and a brush with fine soft bristles.

Many great artists use this type of paint on paper; illustrator and painter, Norman Rockwell, is a notable example. Watercolor is great to experiment with; the pure and direct use of the paint with no restrictions or rules gives it a free-flowing feel. It can be applied as both a line and a wash, and its soft, muted colors look striking and engaging. With Photoshop, you can emulate watercolor painting by creating a layer and layering several effects and controls over it. For instance, the photo shown in Figure 10-10 has several layers created. A number of potential streaming services are in the works, but not one of them has surfaced as a serious threat to Netflix, according to its CEO. “I believe we are still the best and a long-term survivor, but [we’ll] always be nimble to adapt,” Reed Hastings said in a phone interview on Tuesday. “It’s good to have those competitors, but they are great competitors. We are never going to take our eye off the ball.” We’ll always be nimble. We’re never going to take our eye off the ball. Of course, the big battle of late has been Apple versus Google, and one cannot help but think that Apple and Netflix are quietly talking about a partnership at this moment. However, Apple’s CEO Tim Cook has said that he’s never met with or spoken to Netflix CEO Reed Hastings. Hastings also said that he’s not in any ongoing talks with Apple, according to a report on Wednesday. Microsoft also has discussed a partnership with Netflix to help deliver its streaming plans, but Redmond has also denied the talks. “Microsoft’s earlier strategy was to sell hardware, so the company isn’t going to throw marketing dollars at hardware to compete with Netflix,” a Netflix executive said. “If Microsoft can’t innovate in its cloud-based strategy, then maybe it should figure out how to innovate in its hardware strategy.” Hastings said that the different streaming services are good for the market, but it’s not that important to the company. “There are hundreds of different services,” Hastings said. “You’d think we would be worried about competition but we’re not. You compete by making great content.

People are used to seeing great content on all of them. It's not like we don't get to see what's new out there." The company currently streams the most-viewed TV shows and movies on computers and phones, Hastings said. The number of people watching content on phones has doubled in the last year, he noted. "On our side we don't expect to lose traffic to any of those services, because our primary customers are on the iPad or Mac or iPhone," Hastings said.

Q: How to publish pictures from a PWA I'm developing a Progressive Web App and I'd like to use images. How is it possible to distribute those images from my PWA? My issue is that I'm using a domain and the users who use my PWA is not always using the same domain. So how can I use images from different sources? A: Yes, it is possible to do it with `ImgLoad`. You just have to register all the images you need to the `ImgLoad` service and in your app's web manifest file you'll have them under the `dimensions` property.

`service.tsx` - this the react equivalent of what you'd have in a nodejs/server side context

import { ImgLoad } from './ImgLoad';
import { useImgLoad } from './hooks/useImgLoad';
const ImgLoadConfig = { // All image urls goes here };
export const ImgLoad: React.FC = props => { useImgLoad({ ImgLoadConfig }); return ( ); };

`main.tsx` - this is the import entry point for your application

import ImgLoad from './ImgLoad';
class App extends React.Component { render() { return ( My Progressive Web App ); } }
